Emily Walmsley has over 20 years of experience in the Canadian financial services industry, including more than 15 years in the credit union system and extensive knowledge of banking, compliance, product management, marketing and leadership.

A firm believer in lifelong learning, Emily graduated from Capilano University with a Bachelor of Business Administration (Marketing) in 2006, followed by a Professional Communications Certificate in 2007. She obtained the designations of Fellow of the Credit Union Institute of Canada (FCUIC) from Dalhousie University and Certified Product Manager (CPM) from the Association of International Product Marketing & Management in 2019. She also serves as a consultant to new immigrants, university students and community members seeking assistance in pursuing higher education and/or navigating life in Canada. Emily currently serves a Board Director for the Justice Institute Foundation, and previously volunteered as Vice-Chair on the Capilano University Alumni Association Board of Directors from 2016 to 2021.
